Geoff Cowell was one of W. J. Mouat's original teachers when the school first opened in September 1973. At W.J.M., Geoff taught science and math for 24 years, retiring in 1998.

Geoff Cowell inspired his students to think “outside the box”. Geoff’s unique innovative approach to teaching infused physics content into practical real life and interesting activities, often with accompanying stories. He developed a “hands on” science approach with inventive lab activities where physics just made sense. He ignited student imagination with stories, poetry and demonstrations that made physics teaching three-dimensional, more than just sterile calculations. Students, whether or not they like physics, loved his course!

A mentor to physics teachers throughout BC, Geoff’s passion created an exciting atmosphere in his physics classroom where learning was fun, stimulating and, yet, demanding. Students loved him for his empathetic nature and pleasant demeanor. His real legacy lies with the thousands of students that he inspired to achieve their potential by stirring each student’s love of learning.
